“Colorful Havana – Explore & Color” Invites Travelers and Readers to Color, Explore and Experience Cuba

Seattle – Encouraging travelers to color outside the lines, the brand-new “Colorful Havana – Explore & Color” takes travelers on a journey of Havana, Cuba landmarks and hidden gems in a one-of-a-kind travel guide and coloring book. The fourth in the established “Explore & Color” series, “Colorful Havana” features all in-country research, 30 whimsical illustrations, and an invitation to enjoy the best and brightest of Cuba.

Created by Laura Lahm, who launched the series in 2013 with an exploring guide to Seattle, “Colorful Havana – Explore & Color” features famous landmarks such as Calle Obispo, El Capitolio and Plaza de la Catedral plus hidden gems including Cámara Oscura, El Caballero de París and Coppelia. The enclosed map focuses on central Havana and is accompanied by an index in both English and Spanish. The book also highlights a few short excursions outside of Havana for those interested in traveling and coloring further.

All “Explore & Color” books are created, illustrated and printed in the United States. In addition to Seattle and Havana, the series also includes “Colorful Tokyo – Explore & Color” and “Colorful Portland – Explore & Color,” all inspired by the author and illustrator’s passion for global adventure, charming destinations and creativity.

“From the best architecture to the best ice cream, we are proud to debut ‘Colorful Havana’ and invite readers, artists and travelers to a country full of culture and color,” said Lahm. “The illustrations are just waiting to be transformed into art pieces just as the city awaits curious travelers. Fans of our ‘Explore & Color’ books will absolutely love the artistry of this city.”

Americans can still travel to Cuba under one of the 12 U.S. government's authorized categories, and the book can assist with building itineraries particularly for the 'Support for the Cuban People' category.
